ORDER

Before the Court is the Defendant Bradley Cook's (the "Defendant") Motion for Leave to Appeal In Forma Pauperis (the "Motion"). See Doc. 459. The Defendant seeks leave to appeal in forma pauperis the denial of his Motion to Dismiss Count II of the Indictment as Unconstitutionally Vague (the "Motion to Dismiss"). The Defendant pled guilty to Count II for sex trafficking by force, fraud, or coercion, and was sentenced to 240 months of imprisonment on that count. The Defendant's plea agreement expressly reserves the Defendant's right to appeal the denial of his Motion to Dismiss.

In an Order dated October 4, 2013, the Court stated that it could not "determine why Defendant would want to appeal, or how any appeal would be taken in good faith." The Order explained that:

Paragraph 17(b) of the Defendant's plea agreement states that '[i]n the event the defendant prevails on this appeal, and Count Two is dismissed, he will be allowed to withdraw his guilty plea . . . [i]f the defendant chooses to withdraw his guilty plea at that time, the Government, in both the Western District of Missouri and the Eastern District of Missouri, can reinstate all charges in the current indictments and both districts can pursue any and all other charges pertaining to evidence in its possession.'

Consequently, the Court ordered the Defendant to "explain how an appeal would not be futile, and would be taken in good faith.” See Doc. 477.

On October 17, 2013, the Defendant filed his response. Citing United States Supreme Court precedent, the Defendant notes that “an appeal may not be taken in forma pauperis if the trial court certifies in writing that it is not taken in good faith . . . [and] a defendant’s good faith in this type of case [is] demonstrated when he seeks appellate review of any issue not frivolous.” Doc. 487, p. 2 (citing and quoting Coppedge v. United States, 369 U.S. 438 (1962)). The Defendant argues that the issue he seeks to appeal “is not so patently frivolous as to be taken in bad faith,” and “is not one which the United States Supreme Court has finally decided.” Doc. 487, p. 3. The Defendant’s response also emphasizes his right to appeal the denial of his Motion to Dismiss under the plea agreement.

After reviewing the record, the Court will not permit Defendant to appeal in forma pauperis. First, the issue Defendant wants to appeal has already been decided by the Eighth Circuit. In particular, the Defendant’s Motion to Dismiss primarily argues that if “§ 1591 can now be interpreted as pertaining to customers of trafficking victims, it must be declared unconstitutionally vague . . . .” Doc. 117, p. 7. In United States v. Jungers, 702 F.3d 1066 (8th Cir. 2013), however, the court held that § 1591 does apply to customers; the court stated that the “sole issue raised on appeal is whether the plain and unambiguous provisions of 18 U.S.C. § 1591 apply to both suppliers and consumers of commercial sex acts. We conclude they do.” Id. at 1069 (emphasis supplied) (quotations and alterations omitted). Jungers weighs against a finding of good faith. See, e.g., Dotel v. Pollard, 2009 WL 3644918, at * 1 (E.D. Wisc. Oct. 30, 2009) (finding no good faith basis to appeal in part because “the court based its decision . . . on binding Seventh Circuit case law”).

Second, the Defendant fails to explain how prevailing on appeal would result in any tangible benefit to him, such as a reduced sentence. To the contrary, a “successful” appeal could subject Defendant to a panoply of charges, i.e., the Government “can reinstate all charges in the current indictments and both districts can pursue any and all other charges pertaining to evidence in its possession.” Reinstatement would also result in additional expenditures of tax dollars and judicial resources, all for no discernible purpose. These practical considerations all weigh against granting Defendant in forma pauperis status.

Finally, the Defendant argues that he expressly reserved the right to appeal the denial of his Motion to Dismiss. The Court agrees, but the question here is whether Defendant has shown that his appeal should be subsidized by tax dollars. For the reasons discussed above, the Defendant has not made this showing.

For these reasons, the Court hereby certifies that an appeal would not be taken in good faith and that the Defendant is not otherwise entitled to proceed in forma pauperis. Therefore, it is hereby ORDERED that the Defendant Bradley Cook’s Motion for Leave to Appeal In Forma Pauperis (Doc. 459) is DENIED. The Clerk of Court is directed to notify the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals of this Order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
